

Mole Creek Karst

NATIONAL PARK

Located on the slopes of the Great Western Tiers, in an area of over three hundred known caves and sinkholes, the Mole Creek Karst National Park, protects some of the finest and most visited cave systems in Tasmania. Karst is a Slovene/German word used to describe landscapes formed from the chemical erosion of rocks such as limestone. Water passing through plant material as it drains through the soil can become acidic, dissolving the rocks below to form magnificent caves, gorges and underground features. Marakoopa Cave and King Solomons Cave are open to the public. Both caves are home to animals, which have evolved features to survive in these dark environments. The park also contains rare white gum (Eucalyptus viminalis) forests.

Highlights

The highlight of a visit to this park is a guided tour of Marakoopa or King Solomons Cave. Marakoopa Cave has one of the largest glowworm displays in a public access cave in Australia. The smaller King Solomons Cave has many different features including calcite crystals known as ‘King Solomons Diamonds’.

National Park Passes are not required to visit the tourist caves, however you will require one if planning to visit other areas of the Mole Creek Karst National Park. Day and Holiday Park Passes are available from the Mole Creek Caves ticket office, 330 Mayberry Road. The full range of passes including Annual and Two Yearly Passes are available from Service Tasmania Shops state-wide (Mon-Fri 9 am-5pm), and from National Park Visitor Centres. The closest Service Tasmania Shops to Mole Creek Karst National Park are at Deloraine and Sheffield. The closest National Park Visitor Centre is at Cradle Mountain.

Getting There

Mole Creek Karst National Park is situated in the central-north of Tasmania about 40 minutes west of Deloraine. Deloraine can be reached on the A1 from Devonport, Launceston or Hobart (turnoff at Perth). From Deloraine take the B12, about 4 km after Mole Creek take the turn off to the left to Marakoopa Cave. A further 11 km along the B12 takes you to King Solomons Cave. If you plan to visit both caves, remember that it will take about 15 minutes to travel between the two.

When driving at night please be aware that you are sharing the road with wildlife.
